

Media Questions Of The Week

[youtube]W4ewU8xoDVY[/youtube]

1. Lupe Fiasco's show at the RockOn concert in D.C. last weekend was stopped because of his anti-Obama song "Word I Never Said." How come Fiasco wasn't as critical of the last president before Obama for the same reasons?

[youtube]qGDH18R7GfA[/youtube]

2. Isn't it brilliant how Beyonce created a media controversy for herself by not singing live at the inauguration just weeks before her highly anticipated Super Bowl show?

3. Now that Prince has graced the cover of Billboard and will receive their icon award in addition to launching new music will 2013 be the year he truly gets his groove back? And don't all these corny media pundits and watchers criticizing Prince's interview know that difficult interviews have always been his way of promotion/enigma making?