

Arrested Development Is Back With Two New Albums And A Video For I Don't See You At The Club

[youtube id="kvpWYg7ak7w"] Arrested Development is back with two new albums and a video for their first single "I Don't See You At The Club." The group became icons of '90's hip-hop with their pro-Black, pro-people messages that were exemplified by the folksy flavor of "Tennessee" and "Mr. Wendal." "I Don't See You At The Club" is in step with their earlier music but today they are referencing Black Lives Matter and the Confederate flag in front of South Carolina's Capitol Building. Changing The Narrative can be downloaded for free from their official site and This Was Never Home is available at the usual online outlets,
