

Raury's Danny Parra-produced Butterfly Is A Lament On His Artistic Struggles

Raury's Danny Parra-produced "Butterfly" is a gloomy lament about his struggles as a genre-bending rapper in an industry that rewards "the wicked." He raps about his path from doing poorly-attended small shows to becoming financially successful and everyone "being friendly" with him. The other side of his career getting warm is finding out "all my heroes Â fake and all my idols false."