

Paisley Park Has Museum Status

Prince's Paisley Park complex now has permanent museum status thanks to the unanimous vote by the Chanhassen City Council Monday night. Paisley Park was open for tours for most of the month of October then had to be closed until the council could make their decision. It was Prince's desire to turn his home into a museum and since his passing in April it became the most important task outside of handling his musical vault. Paisley Park will be open every week Thursday through Sunday for tours.
