

Kilo Kish Drops Video For Obsessing & Going On Tour With Vince Staples

[youtube id="z_8fZhTyl nE"] Kilo Kish and Elliott Sellers co-directed her video for "Obsessing" which features her running through a parking lot while her sanity unravels. Kish says, "The song was called "Obsessing" before it was written. It was one of many prompts of different social subjects I placed in front of myself when I started writing. I like to explore man-made spaces and boxes we create in which to live more comfortably. The mind is one of those things, boxes inside boxes and sometimes it can become stressed. I'm also kind of obsessed with this image of an individual malfunctioning, a cog in the flow of society. One walking the wrong way up the stairs during rush hour or whatever. Something not working perfectly well in its surroundings. Blending, but not exactly. Boring suit, boring parking garage and some girl (me) just exploding. So for this video, I was excited to play this game."

Kilo Kish released her Reflections In Real Time last year and she is going on Vince Staples' Life Aquatic Tour in February. See tour dates below.

