

Body Count Confronts Police Brutality With Black Hoodie

[youtube id="a_0xYamFYI"] Body Count attacks police brutality with their "Black Hoodie" single. Ice-T and the band are filmed in a parking garage playing the song as the narrative of the unarmed Black man shot and killed by the police is enacted onscreen. The black hoodie is a reference to the one worn by Trayvon Martin and the general idea that all hoodie-wearers are criminals. Body Count's Bloodlust comes out Friday.
