

Kate Pierson Believes People Have The Power

Kate Pierson sings Patti Smith's "People Have The Power" with Uniting Voices Chicago. The B-52s vocalist got the idea to record the song after discussing contemporary politics with her SongVest label head Roy D' Souza. The collaboration between Pierson and the youth choir is an act of creativity and charity as the proceeds from the single will be donated to Uniting Voices Chicago and Sandy Hook Promise. Pierson shared her feelings about her version of Smith's song in a statement. "The reason this song means so much to me is that it demonstrates that we really do have the power to change the world, especially through art and music – and that's why I'm so thrilled to be working with these exceptional young people who are using their voices and actions to express compassion and understanding. Having the voices of the next generation of global leaders featured on the song takes us into the future, a future built on unity and love.”

Pierson released her sophomore solo album, Radios & Rainbows last year and has plans for more live shows in support of it.
