

Media Questions Of The Week

1. What will come of the ongoing feud among the King children now that Dexter has negotiated with Steven Spielberg to direct the 'definitive film' on Dr. King's life?

2. Why does anyone care about what Russell Simmon's white girlfriend had to say to Black women who accused her of being a "gold digger?"

3. Why do so many rappers get shot and killed?

Media Questions Of The Week

1. Why did it take a 4th grader to bring out the truth about waterboarding in a question and answer period at The Jewish Primary Day School with Condoleezza Rice?

Why aren't Dick Cheney and George W. Bush coming to her aid?

3. Why didn't all the Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurants honor the Oprah coupons for a free meal? Why did so many Americans many of whom could afford to buy the meal act like angry starved-out homeless people with no dignity in the process of getting and redeeming the coupon?

Pras Blogs On GlobalGrind.com: Counting my days until I go back to Somalia...

Counting my days until I go back to Somalia and to be honest I'm not sure how or what I feel. I was just there, as some of you might know, and I just barely dodged the bullet. So why do I go back and succumb to the mouth of hell? Why subject myself to such psychological, spiritual and physical torture? Am I a glutton for internal misery that would ultimately destroy every cell in my cerebral?

What I've come to realize while out there is that I think I found a voice through my twittering. How people really were concerned for my well being. I realize that I have this affinity with discovering something when I'm not quite sure what it is I'm searching for, besides a bunch of pirates. It's the embrace of being massaged or being welcomed into the arms of death. It's the unknown that isn't quite tangible, but yet just within grasp, almost like trying to capture sand through one's fingers.

I like dancing with the idea of being on the borderline of sanity and insanity; the idea that I think I know it all, but I'm so uncertain about my fate and what I am truly trying to accomplish. How dare I put myself in harms way with no regard to the ones who love and care for me? Am I so selfish and self-centered that I am blinded by my own egoistic, self-indulgent, self-promoting, self-conscious, empathetic mortal being? Do I really believe that I am destined to liberate the pirates by exposing their endless plight for a free world much less like the United States of America or will I be cursed by the Gods for such binding audacity? Be as it may, I leave in a couple of days for the concrete inferno, the abyss of disparity. The uncertainty that lies before this journey is the driving force that makes me want to conquer immortality.

Media Questions Of The Week

1. What is really going on with the Somalian pirates? If no one will stop the dumping of nuclear waste and the raping of their fish supply what do they expect people to do? Pray?

2. Why are Americans staging tea parties to protest government spending under President Obama but they didn't protest:

4$ a gallon gas

Lack of health care and Bush destroying the law to pay for kids' healthcare and those who made too much for Medicaid but not enough for healthcare. Obama passed this bill after Bush vetoed it twice.

The non- capture of Osama Bin Laden the sole person responsible for 9/11 according to the United States government. Condoleezza Rice said they could not have known anything in advance because the last information they received was "old."

The poor treatment of the families of the survivors of 9/11 and the survivors themselves.

The destruction of the middle class.

All the problems with Hurricane Katrina.

The misinformed war in Iraq that is so bad Bush took advantage of the ban his father put in place to forbid the media from photographing the caskets of fallen soldiers. Obama reversed this ban and let the families decide if they want their loved ones' casket photographed.

The erosion of civil liberties.

And why did Fox News give so much coverage to these "tea parties" but did not cover the protests against Bush in the same manner?
