

Pink Siifu & Turich Benjy Drop Video For Keith Sweat & Announce European Tour Dates

Pink Siifu and Turich Benjy spent the night out smoking and drinking in their video for “Keith Sweat.” The Noah Porter shot clip was captured after dusk in Las Vegas one evening while the twosome was on tour. The single, named after the New Jack Swing singing legend, is from their joint album, It’s Too Quiet!, which was released in 2023. Nick Hakim, Kamilah, and Melo-X were some of the collaborators to join them. The duo had instant chemistry on “Bussin (Cold)” on Siifu’s 2022 GUMBO! and decided to do a full-length project. Their whisper-heavy flow, somewhere on the funk continuum, pops up out of a contemporary southern rap aesthetic with its own charm. They just completed their North American tour in June and will go on a tour of Europe in November. Pink Siifu will tour the United States in September.

LL Cool J Releases Official Video For Q-Tip Produced Saturday Night Special Feat. Fat Joe & Rick Ross

LL Cool J returns with the video for the Q-Tip-produced "Saturday Night Special" featuring Fat Joe and Rick Ross. LL drops a reminder of what New York sounds like as he reminisces about an old friend who was a street legend. His rap is an instructional blueprint for success emphasizing integrity by keeping your word, paying debts, and resisting greed. It is the first single from his forthcoming album The Force. More than a decade ago, his last album Authentic was released. Q-Tip's dreamy beat is the beginning of LL's new sound and there is a lot of anticipation to hear what he did with the whole album. LL explained on his social media that the tracklisting and further details will be revealed soon and to look for The Force to have a release date in the fall.

Did Kendrick Lamar "Ether" Drake with his "Euphoria" and "6:16" diss tracks?

SZA is more genre-less than other artists who've said this, but she definitely makes R&B records. So.
