Throwback: Fishbone-Freddie's Dead

Fishbone covered Curtis Mayfield's "Freddie's Dead" from the Super Fly soundtrack for their 1988 sophomore album Truth and Soul. Their funk-rock version was a change from their roots in ska and punk and it introduced the album as it was their first single. The video for "Freddie's Dead" managed to become their first to get heavy rotation on MTV. Truth and Soul was critically acclaimed for its unique multi-genre approach that combined all of their influences which made them sound like no other band. But the general public still had a hard time accepting a group of Black men soulfully thrashing punk, metal, funk, ska and rock into the future despite them having the support of Columbia Records. The Fishbone experience was always better understood after seeing them live in concert which was something recordings could not translate to the usual listeners. Truth and Soul was not a chart climber but the album inspired many and proved that they were one of the most musically able bands in the world. Fishbone's recording of "Freddie's Dead" was an abounding tribute to Mayfield and a missile in their canon-busting second album. Fishbone released their Intrinsically Intertwined EP in 2014. Angelo Moore aka Dr. Madd Vibe currently records and performs with The Brand New Step and they released the single "Soul Searchers" in 2022. Moore's fine art paintings were shown in Jacksonville, Florida, and can be viewed and purchased at legacyofangelo.com.

Dave Schulz Enlists Angelo

Moore, Cherie Currie & More For New Radicals Cover

Dave Schulz has covered “You Get What You Give” by ’90s alternative rock band New Radicals. Schulz assembled a posse of rockers from various bands to participate on the song and the quarantine video. Angelo Moore of Fishbone, Cherie Currie of the Runaways, Bumblefoot from Guns N’ Roses, Robby Takac of Goo Goo Dolls and more take turns singing their verse. Schulz, who is a keyboardist, producer and composer, explained the lineup,Â

“I’ve known Robby [Takac] most of my life having grown up in Buffalo and of course from touring with the Goo Goo Dolls. It was great to work with him on this. In addition to Robby, I specifically chose members of different bands that spanned a wide array of styles and decades to contribute to this project. I really wanted to appeal to as wide an audience as possible. Not only is this one of my favorite songs, but the message couldn’t be more potent than it is today. It touches on music venues shutting down. It can also be re-interpreted as a hopeful meditation against the general turmoil and frustration stemming from health and political issues dominating the world. I believe we did the song justice.”

Â
Coincidentally, The New Radicals reunited this year to sing “You Get What You Give” at Joe Biden’s inauguration and Vice President Kamala Harris used the song on her campaign trail.Â Â

Schulz believes the song is perfect for uncertain times because of the uplifting message.Â

Angelo Moore & The Brand New Step Share Video For Together Again

Angelo Moore & The Brand New Step have a sun-heavy visual for their single “Together Again.” Moore sings about humanity and reconnecting with people in his life from the past. The calm of this message is the opposite of “Rebellion” last year which addressed the topic of people disregarding the status quo with fire. “Together Again” has hope and video director Tom Lasko was able to create that feeling with Moore looking into the camera, lots of bright light and footage of people safely interacting with each other despite the presence of COVID-19. You can catch Moore’s weekly live streams on his YouTube channel and a new documentary about his life, Forever Moore; The Angelo Project was screened at The NOVA Fest & Capital Film Market earlier this week. The film’s trailer and merchandise can be seen and purchased on the Old Soul Productions website.
