

Angelo Moore & The Brand New Step Plus Del The Funky Homo Sapien Collaborate On Rebellion

Angelo Moore & The Brand New Step have gotten together with Del The Funky Homosapien for “Rebellion.” A founding member of Fishbone and the legendary West Coast rapper trade words about the people’s discontent with displacement and cops too eager to shoot. Moore explains:

“Rebellion” is about fighting back and was inspired by the Sioux Indian tribes’ attempt to gain back their land from the US government that was forcibly installing a pipeline across the Missouri River, their rightful Sioux tribal territory. The organization that goes by the name EARTHJUSTICE engaged in a battle against the authorities until they won and the judge shut down the project, discontinuing the pipeline project.Â This re-iterates in a quote from the song, "It's a rebellion – it ain't a truce." I also wanted to get Del to collaborate with me on this matter because I felt that Del being a rebel with a cause would be perfect for this song and his opinion on the matter.

Earlier this year Moore & The Brand New Step released the single "Los Angeles" which was dedicated to his life as a native of the city and what that has meant for him. The trials of COVID-19 hasn't stopped the band from making music. Listen to "Rebellion" and hear Moore and Del give sonic form to some of the anxiety and restlessness taking place right now in America in the midst of the pandemic and on the eve of election day.

Angelo Moore & The Brand New Step Release Video For Centuries Of Heat

[youtube id="UxBJSk8xc6U"]Angelo Moore & The Brand New Step released their two-song Pendulum Swings project two months ago and today they share the video for "Centuries Of Heat." The song is the title track from their 2016 album and the visual features Moore and his daughter Cheyenne. The Fishbone frontman has been having fun with his other group since they emerged in 2013 with Sacrifice. Centuries Of Heat dealt with everything from Moore's perspective on the music industry to Black Lives Matter with an appearance from Boots Riley and more.Â

Watch Angelo Moore Go Through Each Song Of Fishbone's Truth and Soul

[youtube id="QIqbueoLE5w"] Twenty-nine years ago this month Fishbone released Truth and Soul. At the time they were budding punk funk ska band resistant to stereotypes about Black bands that shaped record company's marketing plans for Black music. Truth and Soul went against the usual expectations of a Black band because Fishbone shamelessly plays multi genres with a mostly punk base. The album is influenced by everyone from Iggy Pop to Curtis Mayfield. Today Fishbone is still against being pigeon-holed and have achieved the status of respected OG Afropunk founders. Frontman and saxophonist Angelo Moore spoke with Riot Fest on the origins of Truth and Soul. Fishbone is on the road right now and Moore has also been making music with The Brand New Step.

Angelo Moore & The Brand New

Step-Gratitude

[youtube id="1tAytIertBY"] Angelo Moore steps away from his legendary Fishbone crew to make a new album with his The Brand New Step band. "Gratitude" is from his forthcoming sophomore effort, Centuries Of Heat on Ropeadope Records. In 2013, he released the soulful and reflective Sacrifice and unveiled music not nearly as frenetic as his Fishbone catalog. Centuries Of Heat will be released on June 10th.
