

Outkast Drop Animated Video For Two Dope Boyz (In A Cadillac) On Anniversary

Outkast celebrates the 25th anniversary of their sophomore album ATLiens with an animated video for “Two Dope Boyz (In A Cadillac),” a video game and an extended version of the album. Andre 3000 and Big Boi went on Twitter and thanked their fans for years of consistent support and making their sophomore album a certified classic. The video game will allow users to be either one of the emcees to battle aliens and collect vinyl albums to gain points and win. There is no release date for the game but the new edition of the album is available now.Â

Â

25 years ago, we released our second album titled #ATLiens. Thank you to every one of yâ€™all that has supported the album and us over the past 25 years.

The extended version is out now: #ATLiens25 ðŸ‘½ðŸ’>, pic.twitter.com/Ry6dvsIZw3

– Outkast (@Outkast) August 27, 2021

Throwback: Outkast-So Fresh, So Clean

Outkast's "So, Fresh So Clean" had the rhythm of a pimp's walk in its encapsulation of funk and soul. Sleepy Brown's falsetto was almost three decades away from Curtis Mayfield's Super Fly soundtrack but sonically he was a close descendant. Big Boi's relaxed hair, fur coat and green gaucho suit worn in the video could've been wardrobe for Super Fly's hero Priest played by the late Ron O'Neal. Andre 3000 took on the look of a street-savvy bohemian utilizing turbans, sports jerseys and leather pants. The duo rapped about their appearance hence the title as well as cars, Showtime At The Apollo, Freddie Jackson, Teddy Pendergrass, clothes and sex. "So Fresh, So Clean" was the third single to come from their fourth album Stankonia. Organized Noise produced the song and it gave Stankonia another push after landing at number two on the Billboard 200 chart and selling half a million copies in its first week. Stankonia was critically applauded and Outkast's fans were happy to be taken on another enjoyable trip.

Outkast released their fifth studio album Speakerboxxx/The Love Below in 2003. Big Boi's fourth solo album Boomiverse was released in 2017. In 2019, Andre 3000 co-wrote and appeared on anderson.paak's "Come Home." The rapper and actor is a cast member of the TV series Dispatches from Elsewhere scheduled to debut March 1, 2020, on the AMC network.

[youtube id="-JfEJq56IwI"]

Â Â

Big Boi: Doin It Featuring

Sleepy Brown Official Video

[youtube id="1juta3XxVK4"]A few days after performing at Super Bowl LIII, Big Boi releases his new single "Doin' It" featuring Sleepy Brown. The longtime friends and collaborators have worked together again and this song is about maintaining long-term relationships. Big Boi's wife Sherlita Patton, who inspired the song, appears in the video along with puppies from his beloved bulldog breed. The other half of Outkast has also announced the 2019 Dungeon Family Tour with Sleepy Brown, Organized Noize, Goodie Mob and KP The Great. Tickets go on sale this Friday, February 8th.Â

Watch: Big Boi's Tiny Desk Concert

Big Boi brought Sleepy Brown and his band to perform a three-song set for NPR's Tiny Desk Concerts. He led live versions of Outkast's "So Fresh So Clean," "The Way You Move" and his "All Night" from his solo catalog. Their almost 13-minute performance with the musicians, singer and DJ Cutmaster Swift made the room appear larger. Big Boi is on the road with Christina Aguilera for The Liberation Tour.Â