Butcher Brown's Solar Music is the next phase of their jazz-based exploration into Black pop. The Richmond, Virginia band's musical inclusiveness is the central inspiration of the new album. The title refers back to the saying "Everything under the sun." The band's creative choices have a long lineage going back to Roy Ayers, A Tribe Called Quest, Guru's Jazzmatazz, Digable Planets, Roy Hargrove, and Robert Glasper. The kinship between jazz, hip-hop, and R&B is a fluid movement for Butcher Brown and their latest addition to the conversation builds each song with playing that swings regardless of the styles in the mix.

"Espionage" featuring guitarist Charlie Hunter stirs like a '60s soul jazz cookout complete with a funky organ and solos that would make Eddie Hazel proud. They take another trip and make house music from Detroit, Baltimore, Chicago, and London their destination with “MOVE (Ride) featuring East London artist Jay Prince. “Turismo” is another escape into dance music reminiscent of the days of Roni Size’s drum and bass hyper rhythms. “Eye Never Knew” conjures up a kettle of modal jazz and poetry when genre shapeshifter Pink Siifu whispers and Keyon Harrold’s trumpet blows sketches in the air. The collaborations are fresh and Butcher Brown’s grooves keep the album interesting. Limited red vinyl copies of Solar Music and merchandise are available with the usual streaming options. Their global tour started this week and tickets can still be purchased.

Butcher Brown & Braxton Cook Join Forces On DYWKD

Credit: Jacky Flav

Butcher Brown reveals the third single from their upcoming Solar Music album. “DYKWYD” featuring Braxton Cook is an acronym for Do You Know What You’re Doing and MC Marcus Tennishu leads the mellow track with a rap about their ascendance. Cook and Butcher Brown have worked together for years most conspicuously on their 2015 joint album. The fusion collective blends jazz and hip-hop on the song with a pure solo from Braxton’s saxophone that has supported Mac Miller, Rihanna and Jon Batiste in the past. They have also dropped the animated video for “DYKWYD” which will have watchers divided on the use of AI. Solar Music comes from the saying “everything under the sun” and that is the band referencing all the influences they have in their sound. As they say, “having something for just about everybody under the sun.”

Keyon Harrold, Pink Siifu, Charlie Hunter, Jay Prince, Michael Millions and Nappy Nina are guest artists on Solar Music. The band will start its global tour in their home state of Virginia on August 24th before traveling to 13 states and seven countries by the end of the tour in December. Solar Music comes out on October 6th via the Concord Jazz label.

Butcher Brown Has A New Single, Album & Tour

Butcher Brown announces their Solar Music album and drops an animated visual for “I Can Say To You” featuring Vanisha Gould. The Richmond, Virginia’s jazz base is always mingling with other genres and Solar is the word they use to describe their multi-influenced sound. Last year their Butcher Brown Presents Triple Trey married Big Band jazz and hip-hop and created a new version of the Notorious B.I.G.’s “Unbelievable.” “I Can Say To You” is a soulful rumination on moving forward in life with the added layer of Tennishu’s rap verses. Solar Music will have the same piebald rhythms with guest appearances from Pink Siifu, Keyon Harrold, Jay Prince, Braxton Cook and more. The band explained the album’s meaning like this:

“Solar Music is everything under the sun. We get asked so often what type of genre we fall into, and at the end of the day, we play all of our influences. It’s not genre specific..It’s all types, & this album is a true representation of that. Solar Music is for everybody.”

Solar Music comes out October 6th and they are going on a global tour set to start in August.

Butcher Brown's Triple Trey Is Out Now

Butcher Brown's big band jazz-themed album Butcher Brown Presents Triple Trey Featuring Tennishu And R4ndzzo Big4nd has landed. The group's rapper Tennishu had initially planned a straightforward hip-hop album but the direction changed and they made a collection inspired by both genres. Their cover of the Notorious B.I.G.'s "Unbelievable" combines both styles effortlessly. The late Brooklyn MC's song is the most accessible song on the album but the whole thing is an easy blend of rhyiming with the band using the sound of a jazz orchestra to recreate electronic beats. Triple Trey has a visual component that embodies the spirit of jazz eclecticism with artwork from Lou Beach who designed the cover for Weather Report's 1977 fusion classic Heavy Weather and Butcher Brown's previous #KingButch album. The vinyl version of Triple Trey will be released on November 11th in black and a limited edition blue which will have a 7" with the 12" containing two bonus songs, "Guitar Army" and "Peace." This weekend they will perform at the Monterey Jazz Festival and next month they are part of the lineup at the Indy Jazz Festival in Indianapolis, Indiana. They have also shared a video for "Breevin."
