

Onyx Collective Share Tango

New York City's Onyx Collective has collaborated with Canadian funk partners Chromeo on their current single "Tango." It is their third collaboration together and all of the songs are part of a larger project they are completing in the future. "Tango" is about fleeting relationships and sounds a bit like Steely Dan and '80s funk. Saxophonist Isaiah says of "Tango":

"A classic from the Onyx vaults. A love song that reflects the vibe of being young in New York and having relationships that don't last forever but seem like they will in the moment."

Last year the band released Onyx Plays Rodgers & Hart/ Rodgers & Hammerstein which was a collection of cover songs by legendary songwriting duos Richard Rodgers & Oscar Hammerstein II and Rodgers & Lorenz Hart.

Chromeo and Toro Y Moi worked together on the song "Come Alive" from Chromeo's forthcoming White Women. Their adventure inside the mall with models that really do "Come Alive" is laying out the concept of the album's focus on fairer-skinned women.
