

Media Questions Of The Week

Was it disrespectful and worthy of legal action when Amanda Seales' character wore the AKA sorority's logo on the TV show Insecure?

Are you watching Wu-Tang: An American Saga?

Insecure Season 4 Soundtrack Is Now Available

HBO has released the soundtrack to season 4 of Insecure. The show is popular for its music as much as its storylines. Issa Rae, who is the star of the series, partnered with Atlantic to launch her Raedio label to support independent, Black and women artists. She has a similar mission for Insecure and with music supervisor, Kier Lehman made sure to present music that reflects Los Angeles and female energy. LION BABE, Kirby and The Free Nationals are just a few of the artists that have graced the show. Stream the soundtrack and see the season finale Sunday at 10 PM ET.

Blimes & Gab's Feelin' It Heard On HBO's Insecure

[youtube id="Sbs0Lkn2YdE"] Last night Blimes and Gab's single "Feelin' It" was heard on HBO's Insecure during episode two of season four. The west coast duo is currently prepping their debut album Talk About It for a summer release. Both of them have individual discographies steeped in Golden Era hip-hop and Gifted Gab's love of R&B. The friends have collaborated on their joint effort with the upcoming album that has appearances from Method Man and Bahamadia. They are also working with veteran journalist, author and screenwriter Nelson George on their own TV show. The video features them have a good time at a dimly-lit house party.Â

Watch: Trailer For Insecure Season 4

[youtube id="PxKK3rU2PP4"] Issa Rae's Insecure is coming back for a fourth season on April 12th on HBO and the trailer came out today. Rae looks in the mirror and reignites her rapper persona as she starts her day. Her rap about building her confidence and the change to her figure is a humorous tease for fans ready for the next chapter of the show. There is just as much curiosity about the plot as there is about who will be on the new soundtrack.Â