

Lorine Chia Dedicates Black Girl Magic Featuring Billie Mitchell To Black Girls Everywhere

Lorine Chia releases “Black Girl Magic” at the end of Black History Month. The song speaks of the joy of enjoying the identity of being a Black woman despite the struggles and it is dedicated to all the Black girls in the world. Chia said this about the song:

“To you, my fellow black girls: We need to appreciate ourselves and each other. Let’s reclaim our narrative. Keep going, push through, and show everyone how immaculate you are. Take pride in your heritage. You are powerful. You are valuable. You are special. No one can stop you, and don’t ever let anyone make you feel like you’re wrong for being so magical.”

Lorine Chia Releases The Loved EP For Valentine’s Day

Lorine Chia celebrates Valentine’s Day with her Soundcloud-only release, the Loved EP. The five-song project has production from J.P. Floyd, Romero Mosley, Sade da Monsta, Sam Hoffman, Famos and Givtyd. She describes the collection as “a few love songs made over the years.” Chia has been establishing herself since releasing her LORINE mixtape and Naked Truths sophomore album. She appeared on Jeezy's 2015 "Sweet Life" with Janelle Monae and has collaborated with Chance The Rapper, The Game, Wiz Khalifa, Jamila Woods, Jim Jones and The Cool Kids.

Lorine Chia wrote "Lorine's Thoughts" a year ago when she felt a revolution was on the horizon. With all the unrest around the country regarding tensions between citizens and the police because of all the unarmed fatalities, she felt now was a good time to make a video for song. Many headlines including those about Eric Garner and Baltimore are used in the video to remind viewers of these ongoing struggles.
