

Brown Sugar Will Celebrate Pam Grier's 70th Birthday In May

Bounce TV's Brown Sugar channel will honor the queen of action movies Pam Grier's 70th birthday in May with a collection of her movies. Grier's Coffy, Sheba, Baby, Friday Foster, The Big Bird Cage, The Big Doll House and Women In Cages will stream on the channel. It was during the 1970s when Grier became famous as a fierce and physical onscreen heroine with style. Her characters were fearless and would take on any villain with force and feminine power. Grier's work paved the way for every woman who played an action hero after her including Angelia Jolie, Michelle Rodriguez, and Gal Gadot among others. She soared again in the '90s with Quentin Tarantino's Jackie Brown that was created just for her. Grier will celebrate her birthday next month with Brown Sugar's programming dedicated to her and she will also be seen in the new movie Poms which opens on May 10th.

Pam Grier Biopic In The Works

A biopic about '70s action film star Pam Grier is being developed and shopped. Grier's life as the first woman to make action movies and her colorful personal life with exes like Richard Pryor and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar made her one of the most watched and talked about stars of the era. Bennie Richburg wrote the script for the project that has the working title Pam.

According to Deadline, Jay Pharoah connected to Pam after reading the script and is slated to play Pryor. Grier had a resurgence in popularity when she starred in the Quentin Tarantino-directed Jackie Brown. Tarantino wrote the movie specifically for Grier and Robert Forster. The film just had its 20th anniversary this past December. She also had a recurring role on The L-Word.

In 2017, Grier appeared in Bad Grandmas and Rose. She was scheduled to be in an Amazon series directed by David O. Russell that has been stopped because of the Harvey Weinstein scandal.

Grier shared her life on the page when she released her autobiography Foxy: My Life In Three Acts in 2010.
