

Petite Noir Releases Visual Album La Maison Noir In Collaboration With Red Bull Music South Africa

Petit Noir and Red Bull Music South Africa have collaborated to release the La Maison Noir visual album. The four-part film chronicles Petit Noir's life growing up in The Democratic Republic of the Congo. He is also releasing the album La Maison Noir. Petite Noir gave more details about the album in a press release:Â

*"The Congolese cosmogram represents a constant circular motion of the element that symbolizes rebirth. We all go through a rebirth every few years and this visual album is all about rebirth."*Â

The film contains a lot of symbolism in the colors worn which represent different elements of the earth and the constant walking is there to mimicÂ the endless journey of life.Â
[youtube id="hMoVH1pv5gg"]

Watch: Petite Noir's Trailer For La Maison Noir

South African native Petite Noir calls his style of maneuveringÂ rhythmÂ Noirwave. He introduced himself with the single "Blame Fire" that sounds like early '90s house music with an international influence. Today he shares the trailer for his visual mini album La Maison Noir that was shot in Namibia. The songs are influenced by the four elements: earth, air, water and fire and he has collaborated with Saul Williams and Danny Brown on some of the music. La Maison Noir comes out October 5th and Petite Noir will celebrate by curating the first No Borders International Music Festival on November 3rd to bring together Noirwave artists. The film will stream at lamaisonnoir.com on the day of the album's release. [youtube id="PDRLf_0_ZK4"]