

Phony Ppl Premiere Video For Way Too Far

Phony Ppl shared one of their best videos today with the premiere of the Joe Weil-directed visuals for “Way Too Far.” The stunning cinematography is set with a blue midnight tone and the camera scans the band on various floors of an endlessly tall building. There is daylight and later the view of New York City’s subway before the events go back to the woman who is the focus of the song. There are cameo appearances from Patrick Page II of The Internet and Matte Brand creator Briana Shantee Wilson and Phony Ppl are currently touring their “m̂zÄ-ik” album.Â

Watch: Phony Ppl Do Rhythm Roulette

[youtube id=“kQNr7TEhUp0”]Watch Phony Ppl pull records and create “Ashes Ashes” for Mass Appeal’s Rhythm Roulette. Their flexibility in being able to use their musicianship with the principles of hip-hop have been heard in their music but it takes on another level of excitement actually seeing them work. Phony Ppl’s sophomore albumÂ m̂zÄ-ikÂ is out now.Â

Phony Ppl Release New Album MÅŕ'zÄŕ-ik

Phony Ppl's new album MÅŕ'zÄŕ-ik came out today and the Brooklyn quintet will kick off their next tour on Election Day. The band's eclectic approach that encompasses, R&B, funk, hip-hop and jazz created a die-hard following when they debuted with Yesterday's Tomorrow in 2015. MÅŕ'zÄŕ-ik is the next stage of their creative output pulled from four years of recording in various places including their home studios. They will headline their tour dates in California and will join Pusha T on the second leg of his Daytona tour.
