

Throwback: The Dirtbombs - Sharevari

[youtube id="hAI16W7Z0eY"] The Dirtbombs covered "Sharevari" for their 2011 Party Store album. The Detroit garage rock band recorded covers of nine Detroit techno classics to see if they would have a favorable outcome. Their version of the song originally recorded by A Number Of Names complements the first recording by keeping the same exact arrangement. Mick Collins, the leader of The Dirtbombs, wondered if a rock band could successfully cover a bunch of songs made with pure electronics and "Sharevari" as well as the entire tracklisting lost no quality in sound. "Sharevari" was still just as danceable as it was during Detroit's early techno days when it emerged and infiltrated Detroit radio and The Scene dance show. The

Dirtbombs' s 2013Â Ooey Goey Chewy Ka-blooey! is their most recent release.Â

Detroit garage band The Dirtbombs have covered a few Detroit techno classics for their new Party Store EP. Scion A/V is presenting those songs as part of their remix series. Producers Omar S., Ectomorph and Kyle Hall add their touch to the band's versions of "Sharevari" by A Number Of Names, "Jaguar" from Knights of The Jaguar and Innerzone Orchestra's "Bug In A Bassbin." The EP comes with a booklet where Dirtbombs frontman Mick Collins talks about his encounters with techno music growing up in Detroit.

Scion A/V Remix: The Dirtbombs tracklisting:

1. Sharevari (Omar S Remix)
2. Jaguar (Ectomorph Remix)
3. Bug In The Bassbin (Kyle Hall Remix)
4. Sharevari (Original Dirtbombs Version)
