

RIAA Wants To Interfere With Internet Service To Stop File Sharing

The Wall Street Journal reports today that the RIAA will stop filing lawsuits against music downloaders but they want ISPs to slow down their service. If it appears that someone is downloading music their internet service provider would send them a few warning emails, slowdown their service or terminate it completely.

Read the article here