

G-Funk Documentary Streaming On YouTube

[youtube id="7B78awTk4MU"]G-Funk is a '90s genre of hip-hop influenced by P-Funk and R&B. Snoop Dogg, Warren G and Nate Dogg set the mold for the new style and made it famous around the world. G-Funk: The Untold Story Of Warren G and How Hip-Hop's Most Iconic Sub-Genre Came To Be is a documentary about the movement that debuted on YouTube today. The film can only be streamed through YouTube's Premium channel. There are interviews with The D.O.C., Chuck D, Ice Cube, Wiz Khalifa and more. Warren G says, "I really wanted people to experience the world of West Coast Hip Hop seen through my eyes, and also how it helped inspire and evolve the current music of today. We all knew we were creating something dope but didn't realize it would have such a lasting effect on music indefinitely."

The documentary is the first feature film from director Karam Gill.

Throwback: Mista Grimm-Indo Smoke

[youtube]eXrz6rJdMtE[/youtube]

Mista Grimm is a California rapper who had a deal on the Epic Records subsidiary 550. "Indo Smoke" is from the 1993 "Poetic Justice" soundtrack and it was Grimm's first release. Nate Dogg and Warren G had guest appearances on the track that described the glories of green smoke. The rapper made a contribution to the "Higher Learning" soundtrack in '94 with the song "Situation: Grimm." Grimm's debut album, Things Are Looking Grimm got shelved after an aborted '95 release date. He last appeared on DJ Pooh's '97 album Bad Newz Travels Fast and Warren G's The Return Of The Regulator in 2001.

Media Questions Of The Week

1. Why did a company as big as Yahoo make a mistake and use Warren G's photo for Nate Dogg's death notice?

2. Could there have been another way for Plies to denote his hotness other than buying a diamond studded iron?
